Dão Tinto

This wine from the Dão is by Quinta do Covão in the stunning village of Sandomil, with its fluvial beach in the river Alva and its old Roman bridge, nestled in the Beira Alta subzone, near the city of Seia. The vineyards of the Quinta are scattered along the slopes of the Estrela mountain range, deep in a continental climate with high altitudes where cool nights follow warm sunshine. This climate, combined with granitic soils and fresh river water, is ideal for growing grapes with high acidity and making wines that can be cellared. Lucia Ferreira, sister to our Douro winemaker, Filipe Ferreira, oversees the viticulture and vinification here.

This wine comes from the highest vines in the Dão region – and all of Portugal for that matter! These vines represent an authentic mountain vineyard as the only sites in the region cultivated in terraces, planted between 100 and 600 meters. Their extreme altitude and climate, protected from the intense winds from Spain and distanced from the sea air mass of the Atlantic, mark an exceptional territory that translate into wines of unique character.

Both fresh and firm, this wine is persistent across the palate showing versatility and elegance with toasty elements accompanying fresh red fruits and soft tannins.
